Food Assistance Programs for Seniors

Some seniors have a difficult time maintaining adequate nutrition during retirement. Some aren't physically able to cook for themselves while others can't afford groceries.

In the following tables, we've listed the contact information for a few programs that could help you meet your dietary needs. Home-delivered meals provider Meals on Wheels and a variety of food banks are included, as are government-funded options.

Meals on Wheels

Meals on Wheels delivers healthy, prepared meals to the homes of seniors who would likely have to move to a senior care facility because they're unable to cook for themselves and are at risk of malnutrition. The program is available throughout the state and administered through its Area Agencies on Aging.
